MASS. PROSECUTOR MAY BUST POT BUSINESSES

Massachusetts' top federal prosecutor will not rule out prosecuting businesses dealing in marijuana, he said on Monday, less than a week after the Trump administration rescinded an Obama-era policy easing enforcement in states that legalized the drug. Massachusetts is one of eight states whose voters have legalized use of recreational marijuana, which remains illegal under federal law. Legal retail sales of the drug were to begin in Massachusetts this year under the terms of a voter initiative passed in 2016. "Deciding, in advance, to immunize a certain category of actors from federal prosecution would be to effectively amend the laws Congress has already passed, and that I will not do," U.S. Attorney Andrew Lelling said in a statement posted on Twitter.

NORTH, SOUTH KOREA TO TALK BEFORE OLYMPICS

2 North and South Korea will hold their first formal talks in more than two years on Tuesday, brought together by sport to discuss how the North's athletes can attend next month's Winter Olympics in the South despite simmering fears of conflict. Regardless of its narrow, primarily sporting agenda, the meeting will be closely watched by world leaders eager for any sign of a reduction in tensions on the Korean peninsula amid rising fears over North Korea's development of nuclear weapons and defiance of United Nations Security Council resolutions. "The talks will focus on North Korea's participation in the Pyeongchang Winter Olympics, and our preparations have centered around some requests made by the North for a peaceful Olympic Games," said Unification Ministry spokesman Baek Tae-hyun.

PROTECTED STATUS ENDS FOR SALVADORANS IN US

4 Around 200,000 Salvadorans allowed to live in the United States since 2001, after earthquakes in El Salvador, must leave the country in 2019, U.S. officials said on Monday, marking the Trump administration's latest move to tighten immigration law enforcement. Termination of the Salvadorans' temporary protected status (TPS) will take effect Sept. 9, 2019, to give them time to leave or seek lawful residency, and for El Salvador to prepare for their return, officials said. The decision to end TPS for Salvadorans is part of the administration's broader push to deport immigrants who are in the United States illegally. The decision was heavily criticized by immigrant advocates who said it ignored violence in El Salvador, which has one of the world's highest murder rates.

NBC: MUELLER'S TEAM CONSIDERING TRUMP Q&A

5 President Donald Trump's lawyers are talking to the Federal Bureau of Investigation about a possible interview with the president as part of special counsel Robert Mueller's probe into Russian interference in the 2016 election, NBC News reported on Monday. Citing three people familiar with the situation, NBC said lawyers for Trump had met with representatives of Mueller's office in late December to discuss the logistics of any such interview. They included the location and length of such an interview as well as legal standards and options for its format, including written responses instead of a formal sit-down, according to the network. Mueller has been appointed by the Justice Department to investigate allegations of Russian meddling in the November 2016 election and possible collusion with Trump's campaign.

Public support mounts as Oprah Winfrey 'actively thinking' of running for president

Oprah is reported to be considering a bid for the White House in 2020. But how likely is it that she'd win?

SAM NEWHOUSE
@scnewhouse
sam.newhouse@metro.us

Call her the anti-Trump.

Over three decades, Oprah Winfrey has amassed a personal fortune and huge public celebrity through a personally-branded media empire. She is one of the most powerful African-American women in the country, with a personal worth estimated at some $2.7 billion, according to Forbes.

And in the wake of a stirring speech at the Golden Globes awards Sunday night, calls are mounting for Oprah, 63, to run for president in 2020.

Sources identified as "close friends" of Winfrey's told CNN that she has been "actively thinking" about making the transition into politics for months, with one asserting no decision has yet been made.

The Los Angeles Times quoted Stedman Graham, Winfrey's longtime partner, as saying on Sunday that "it's up to the people. ... She would absolutely do it."

In a now-deleted tweet, NBC tweeted "Nothing but respect for OUR future president," along with a picture of Oprah during the Golden Globes.

Oprah is a former television host, actress, movie and television producer, and chief executive of the Oprah Winfrey Network (OWN) channel on cable.

Trump also powered his successful 2016 campaign on the back of his celebrity reputation from reality TV show "The Apprentice," as well as long-cultivated attention in New York newspapers.

In recent years, Winfrey has lent her star power to endorse Democratic presidential candidates: Barack Obama when he was seeking to become the first black U.S. president in 2008 and Hillary Clinton in her campaign against Trump in 2016.

In the past Winfrey has said she is not interested in running for president, for example saying in a CBS interview in October when asked about the 2020 presidential election that "there will be no running for office of any kind for me."

Additional reporting by Reuters.

Who else could run in 2020?

Other big names rumored for a 2020 run include political players as well as celebrities:

- Former first lady Michelle Obama
- Former Vice President Joe Biden
- Breitbart News chairman Steve Bannon
- Actor Dwayne "The Rock" Johnson
- Facebook founder Mark Zuckerberg

ANALYSIS

How likely is it that Oprah could win the presidency?
Public opinion analyst Karlyn Bowman, of the American Enterprise Institute, said Oprah's shift into politics could be plausible.

Do you think Oprah could really run?
She's pretty popular, as you can imagine, among the American public. God knows, entertainment culture and celebrity culture has certainly infiltrated politics, there's no question about it. Now, as to whether people would take her seriously, its possible. She'd have to develop some issue positions, but she's clearly very popular.

Isn't it too early to speculate on this?
Donald Trump was pretty speculative at one time. But being popular at the Golden Globes is one thing, being someone whose considered to be of presidential timbre is quite another. This is very early speculation in a race where we've heard at least 29 different names mentioned, so it's definitely very, very early.

Obama will speak at sports conference in Boston next month

Barack Obama is coming back to the Boston area, this time to speak at an MIT conference focused on sports.

KRISTIN TOUSSAINT
@kristindakota
kristin.toussaint@metro.us

Former President Barack Obama will be coming back to Boston next month, but this trip doesn't have to do with his daughter at Harvard or receiving any awards at the JFK Library.

Obama will be in the area to speak about sports at a conference hosted by the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Next month marks the 12th annual MIT Sloan Sports Analytics Conference, held this year Feb. 23 to 24 at the Boston Convention and Exhibition Center.

Daryl Morey, general manager of the NBA's Houston Rockets, announced Obama's appearance on his Twitter, in which he called the 44th president a "well-known sports fan."

Obama seems to favor basketball: In 2008, as president-elect, he called for an eight-team college football playoff (a four-team playoff began in 2014). While in office, he would appear on ESPN to fill out his March Madness bracket, and in a 2015 interview, he once said he would "absolutely" want to be part of the ownership of an NBA team.

Morey is a co-chair of the conference, which is focused on exploring the role of analytics in the sports industry. Industry professionals and students will gather for forums, workshops and a startup tradeshow competition.

Sports analytics is a key part of business decisions in the industry, affecting everything from the fan experience and concession operations to evaluating athlete talent, improving player performance and preventing injuries, experts say.

Obama is scheduled to speak Feb. 23 at the conference and will address "his time in office and the next chapter in his life," organizers said.

Other conference speakers include Steve Ballmer, the former Microsoft CEO and owner of the Los Angeles Clippers; Seattle Storm point guard Sue Bird; Nate Silver, data journalist and editor-in-chief of FiveThirtyEight; and the commissioners of the NBA, NHL and MLB.

If you're hoping to catch the former president's talk, you'll have to act fast. General admission and student-rate tickets are sold out, according to MIT Sloan, but "general admission plus" and VIP tickets, which run between $850 and $2,500, are available.

Quincy's Wollaston MBTA station closed for 20 months

Quincy Red Line riders take note: Wollaston station is now closed for a 20-month renovation.

The MBTA is reminding customers that beginning Monday, Jan. 8, the "aging" Quincy station will be closed to allow workers to make improvements. The nearly two-year closure is necessary, transit officials said, to expedite the reconstruction and make it fully accessible as soon as possible.

Improvements to the station will include "major accessibility enhancements, state-of-the-art safety features and new drainage and flood-prevention infrastructure" the MBTA said.

Wollaston is the only Red Line station that is not ADA-accessible, meaning it is not compliant with the Americans With Disabilities Act standards for accessibility. Post-reconstruction, Wollaston will be fully accessible to all passengers, the MBTA said.

Other updates will include new elevators, more customer paths, upgraded stairways, new bathrooms, additional lighting, new electrical and fire protection and more. The construction is valued at $33 million, according to the MBTA.

Shuttle buses will take passengers from Wollaston to North Quincy and Quincy Center stations for the entire 20 months Wollaston is closed. The station's parking lot will also be reduced by 110 spaces during construction, the transit authority said, but T customers will be able to use the roughly 420 remaining spots there, as well as the parking at North Quincy.

The 5 schools you should be applying to

Are you covering enough ground with your college applications?

PAT KING
@MetroBOS
patrick.king@metro.us

Weigh all of your options! ISTOCK

Now that we have reached the halfway point of the school year, the time has come for many students to consider their college-application plan of action.

It's nice to think that your dream school will fling open its doors and name a wing after you once it's received your application. However, it might be a good idea to be a little realistic. So brace yourself for this bombshell: Not everyone gets into their first-choice school.

We spoke with Adrian Ridner, CEO and co-founder of Study.com, about the five types of schools you should apply to and why they are important.

The dream school

"You may not be able to afford your dream school, or your scores may not qualify, but you've always pictured yourself here, so it should definitely be on your list. These schools can offer great networking opportunities and can look good on résumés and, if you do get in, you could receive a scholarship or grant to help with finances. But don't put all your eggs in one basket. Make sure your list of schools is diversified and balanced."

The safety school

"You should apply to at least one safety school because you want to have choices at the end of the college-application process. Think of it as a backup or safety net. Going to college — any college — is the most important goal here. In most cases, where you get that bachelor's degree from isn't as important in the job market. Instead, focus on refining specific skills that will be relevant to your future career."

The low-cost school

"The average student loan debt is over $28k per borrower — that's a crippling amount. In fact, research has shown that it takes an average of 21 years for a student to repay their student loans. Whether it's a community college, in-state school or somewhere you'll receive a big scholarship, you should always include the low-cost option on your list to avoid being strapped down by debt for the better part of your adult life."

The flexible school

"You just never know when life might get in the way, so be sure to apply to a school that caters to a variety of needs and allows you to balance school with other life commitments. This might mean a college that offers online courses to help you balance work and school, or a college that allows you to live off campus as a freshman so you can tend to family commitments."

The perfect fit

"This could be a hidden gem you hadn't previously thought of but is a good overall fit for you and your major. Look at the dimensions of your dream school, then find alternative schools that fit that category. For example, you may want to go to MIT for their top-notch engineering program, but you find that Cal Poly also has a solid program and is more attainable. Sometimes it just takes a change of attitude to realize that a school can be your perfect fit."

Stonehill College emphasizes creativity in integrated marketing communications master's degree

Your favorite brands aren't your favorites just because of their awesome products. They're also favorites because a team of graphic designers, copywriters and marketing strategists collaborated to present their products' strengths in a way that resonated with your values and aspirations.

The strategies and creative ideas behind these campaigns are an example of integrated marketing communications (IMC) in practice — marketers, advertisers, public relations specialists, copywriters and graphic designers all working together to create a clear and convincing message and determining how to make sure you see it.

"IMC creates an environment where communication messages are clear, consistent and carefully linked together to be more meaningful and impactful," said Lee McGinnis, director of Stonehill College's IMC master's degree program.

Stonehill's IMC program helps students look at the marketing field through a variety of lenses. Students learn how individual disciplines such as marketing, communications and graphic design interact and strengthen each other.

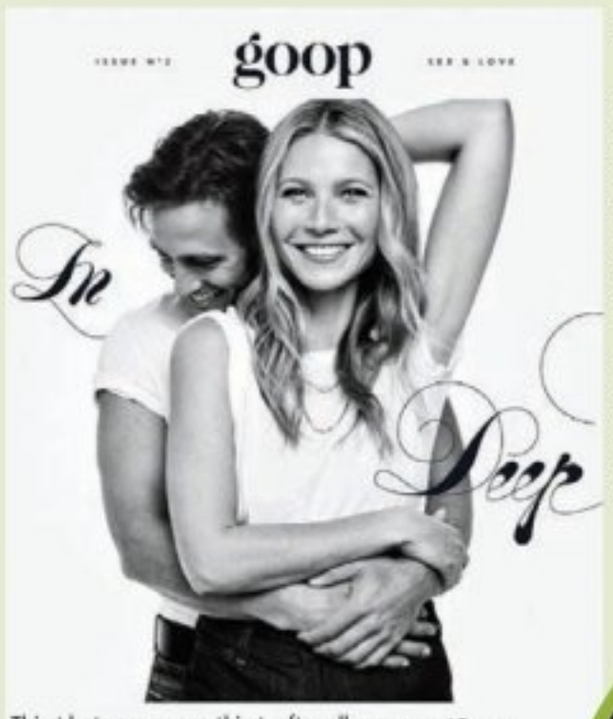
"Stonehill really has a handle on the interdisciplinary focus, a real attribute to the program," said Melissa Ratliff, director of graduate admission at Stonehill College. She says the program is different from an MBA program because it studies issues from many different perspectives, allowing you to draw out your creativity more in your career.

The IMC master's degree program is offered part time, with the opportunity to graduate in as few as two years. Fall and spring courses meet just one night a week. As a student at Stonehill, you will work alongside other working professionals who are also looking to advance their careers.

"The IMC program is focused on being innovative," said McGinnis. "We combine the best of the latest creative methods with digital marketing, e-commerce and other high-tech marketing and communications courses to help students elevate their career prospects."

Stonehill College is conveniently located in Easton, Massachusetts, just 22 miles from Boston and 35 miles from Providence. Publications involved in assessing U.S. colleges and universities, including U.S. News & World Report, Bloomberg and Forbes, repeatedly single out Stonehill as being among the best when it comes to value, outcomes and a commitment to making the world a better place.

Gwyneth's GOOP love story



Thirst bots are gonna thirst, after all. INSTAGRAM/@GOOP

After a few months of speculation, Gwyneth Paltrow and Brad Falchuk have confirmed their engagement he only way these thirst bots know how: with a GOOP cover.

Though the news broke in November, Paltrow waited to make the official announcement in the cover story of the "Sex & Love" issue which, by the way, hits newsstands Jan. 9.

"[At] midlife, I have tried to accept how complex romantic love can be," Paltrow writes inside. "I have decided to give it a go again, not only because I believe I have found the man I was meant to be with, but because I have accepted the soul-stretching, pattern-breaking opportunities that (terrifyingly) are made possible by intimacy."

Sure!

Paltrow, 45, and Falchuk, 46, started dating about three years ago, having met on the set of "Glee," as you do.

I've said it once, and I'll say it again: Congratulations, you two rich people!

Kit Harington gets drunk and disorderly

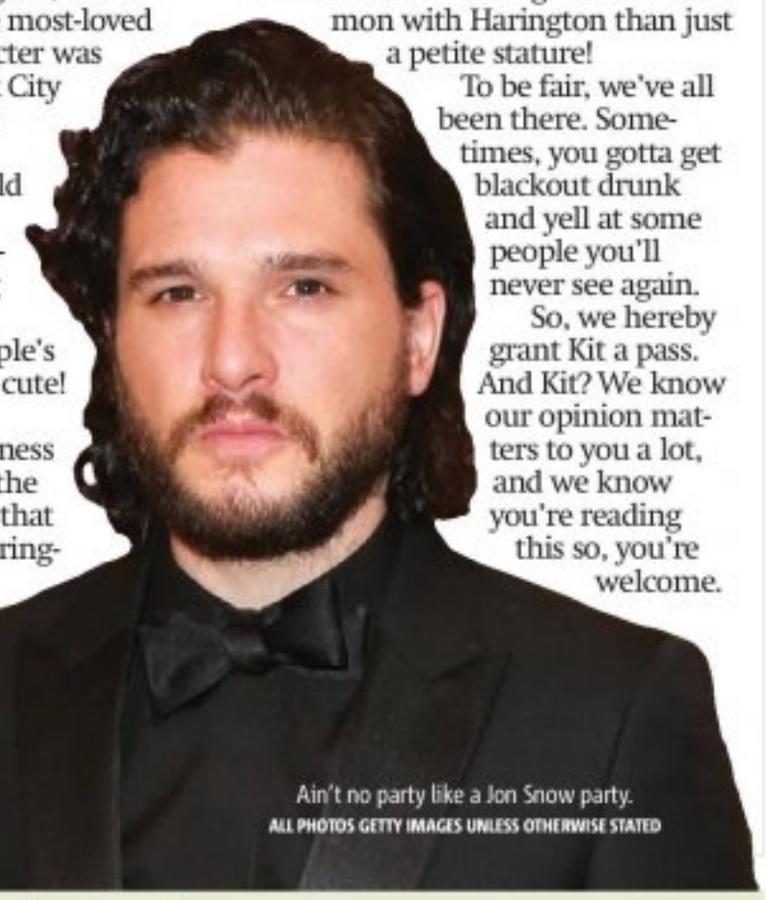
Jon Snow knows nothing — except for how to get kicked out of a bar. Oh, that was terrible.

But it's true: Kit Harington, the pint-size hunk behind the most-loved "Game of Thrones" character was thrown out of a New York City bar Friday night for being drunk and disorderly.

TMZ says the 31-year-old prepped for a pool game, but then he started "banging on the table, grabbing at pool cues and getting in people's faces." Not cute! An eyewitness tells the site that Harington was asked to leave the bar — and that he did! — but then he came back and had to be literally dragged out. We knew we had something more in common with Harington than just a petite stature!

To be fair, we've all been there. Sometimes, you gotta get blackout drunk and yell at some people you'll never see again.

So, we hereby grant Kit a pass. And Kit? We know our opinion matters to you a lot, and we know you're reading this so, you're welcome.



Ain't no party like a Jon Snow party.

Bella Thorne opens up

#TIMESUP, y'all.

Bella Thorne is adding her voice to #MeToo.

The 19-year-old took to Instagram to detail her own experience with sexual abuse and it's pretty chilling, tbh.

"I was sexually abused and physically growing up from the day I can remember till I was 14," she wrote. "When I finally had the courage to lock my door at night and sit by it. All damn night. Waiting for someone to take advantage of my life again.

"Over and over I waited for it to stop and finally it did. But some of us aren't as lucky to get out alive."

She added on Twitter, "I never knew what was right or wrong growing up. I didn't know the person sneaking into my bedroom at night was a bad person."

The actress got an outpouring of support on Twitter, where users commended her bravery for coming out with her own experience, and adding to the Time's Up movement, too.

Brava, Bella. Speaking up isn't easy.

Shiny!

'Outlander' star Caitriona Balfe is engaged

Caitriona Balfe — star of "Outlander," the sexiest time-travel show to ever exist — is engaged.

The Irish actress showed off her new bling at the Golden Globes Sunday night, and it's very sparkly! About the engagement, the 38-year-old really just poured her heart out nonstop, gushing to People, "It happened over the break. I'm very happy." OK!

Balfe's fiance is Tony McGill, whom she's been dating for about two years. Yep: Turns out her very sexy, very emotional — did I mention very, very sexy? — connection with co-star Sam Heughan is just really convincing acting. Brava, honestly.

Congratulations to these two. It's nice that love still exists for rich people with shiny hair and really nice skin.

The 8 biggest fuccbois on TV

The term "fuccboi" (also see "f—kboy" and "f—kboi") has been around for a long time. Its definition today — the one that's easy to digest for the masses — is basically a good-looking dude (or rarely, a woman) who plays games, is incapable of basic communication and also? Thinks he's the hottest s—t on Dumbledore's green earth.

All the more reason to celebrate them, we say. At least, the fictional ones. As far as television goes, 2017 was pretty meh — but it offered us fuccbois galore. So as we embark on 2018, we're remembering 10 of the most f—kery-having fuccbois from last year in TV. RACHAEL VAUGHAN CLEMMONS

Adam, "Jane the Virgin"

This year, we praised the fuccbois of "Jane the Virgin," and for good reason: Jane reconnected with her ex, Adam, early in the season. And Adam, bless is heart, was a beautiful, no-good fuccboi from the beginning. Maybe he didn't know he was playing games with Jane's heart — but by the time he breaks the news to that he's moving to California, it's like, boy, bye.

Euron, "Game of Thrones"

With his makeover into a medieval-era Captain Jack Sparrow and his cavalier attitude toward raping, pillaging and murdering, Euron Greyjoy is absolutely the biggest fuccboi in Westeros. Besides, it's very clear that it's not Cersei he's taken with, so much as her position of power. Rude!

Lawrence, "Insecure"

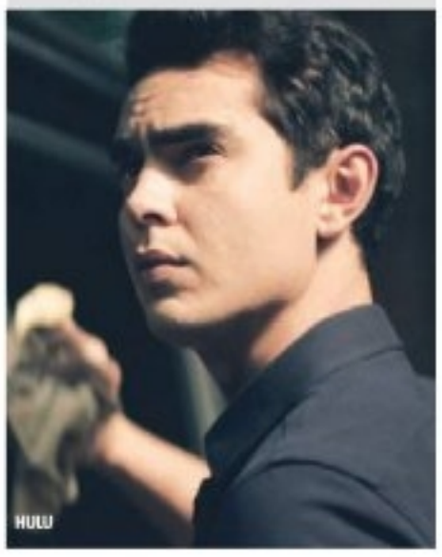
We saw a whole lot of Lawrence this year. A whole lot. And while we're not complaining, his attitude this season — and the way he treated the women he dated — was trash. Classic fuccboi tendencies.

Jesse, "Preacher"

All of the characters of "Preacher" get off on being bad. But Jesse Custer is, by far, the worst. Despite constantly saying he loves Tulip, he barely pays attention enough to know what's ever going on with her. Babygirl had PTSD! But worst of all, Jesse can't be bothered because of his one-track mind. A fuccboi supreme.

Nick, "The Handmaid's Tale"

Nick is mysterious, hard to read and very, very hot. Even by season's end, we don't know whose side he's on — or much more about him, because let's be honest, his flashback episode did nothing to clarify. Erring on the side of fuccboi with this one.

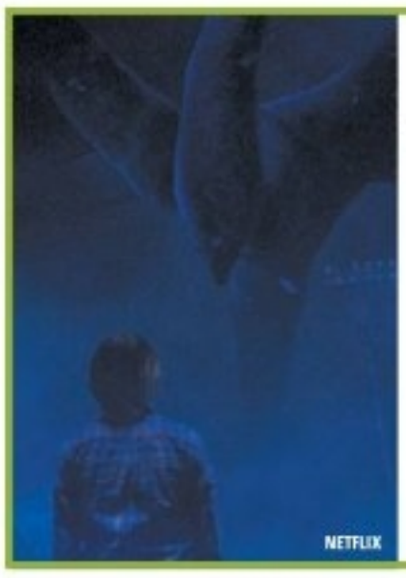


BoJack, "BoJack Horseman"

Fun fact: knowing you suck doesn't make you any less a fuccboi. Case in point? BoJack. That horse has been self-aware about his self-destructive tendencies for a few seasons now, but it looks like that's not enough incentive to change. Typical.

Nola Darling, "She's Gotta Have It"

Sorry, not sorry: But Nola Darling is trash. She says she's a "sex-positive, polyamorous pansexual." But at best, she's selfish and out of tune with her partners' needs and wants. At worst, she doesn't care who she hurts; she's a poor communicator and she's rude AF. (Dewanda Wise playing Nola, though, is amazing.)



The Upside Down, "Stranger Things"

The Upside Down is always involving itself when nobody asked for its opinion. It's always messing everything up for everybody — especially poor Will. But also? The Upside Down is definitely very good looking in its own spooky way.

Drink beer and work on your golf swing at this luxury fitness club

Lynx is now open in the Back Bay.

MATT JUUL
@RunTheJuuls
matthew.juul@metro.us

Boston golf enthusiasts can work on their swings all year long thanks to a luxury gym in the Back Bay.

Located at Park Plaza, the recently opened Lynx Fitness Club has teamed up with Topgolf for an immersive sports and entertainment experience, the first of its kind in New England. The Topgolf Swing Suite will allow guests to show off their skills with a trio of simulator hitting bays that provide all sorts of data to help members up their game. Lynx has also hired a PGA pro as a full-time instructor.

The Topgolf Swing Suite is more than just a virtual driving range, though, as it comes complete with comfy lounges, plus food and beverage services—yes, even beer and cocktails.

"What we're doing is creating what we would consider a kind of urban club or country club within the city," says Lynx co-founder and CEO Bill Najam. "It's really a state-of-the-art facility."

According to Najam, golf is only 5 percent to 10 percent of the focus for Lynx. He hopes the real draw will be its "boutique-style" fitness-club offerings.

Taking over for what used to be a David Barton Gym, Lynx has revamped the space with a 1,200-square-foot turf training area, top-of-the-line cardio and strength equipment such as Peloton bikes and Rogue power racks, plus a pair of group fitness studios.

"We went out and found the best instructors we could find in the city," says Najam.

Lynx is also using a limited-membership model to avoid overcrowding so guests don't have to wait to use equipment, a problem at many popular gyms. The goal is to make the fitness club feel like a more personal experience where staff and members can get to know each other.

"We wanted to create more of a boutique experience where you come in and people know your name," Najam says. "We're trying to create a community."

Fired up Brady should feast on Titans

It's a sure thing that Patriots quarterback Tom Brady will be fired up for this Saturday's playoff game against the Titans. GETTY IMAGES

Everything is lining up for Tom Brady to have an epic performance Saturday.

MATT BURKE
@burke_metro
matthew.burke@metro.us

Solving the Patriots is an inexact science as the Pats morph into a different version of themselves week-to-week based on their opponents' strengths and weaknesses.

That said, two things have proven to be something of an Achilles heel over the years. If you have a great pass defense and a great running game, you're in business against the Pats.

The Patriots' Divisional Round opponent this Saturday night, the Tennessee Titans, aren't great in either category – so the 13.5 Las Vegas spread on the game in favor of the Pats is warranted.

This season, the Titans gave up 239.3 passing yards per game, which ranked 25th in the NFL (to be fair, the Patriots ranked 30th in the NFL in passing yards per game, giving up 251.3 yards per contest).

The Tennessee defense struggled with top-notch quarterbacks this season — most notably old friend Jimmy Garoppolo on Dec. 17. Garoppolo completed 30-of-43 passes for 381 yards, threw a touchdown and had no interceptions in a 25-23 Niners victory last month in Santa Clara. Jimmy G posted a sparkling 106.8 passer rating in that one.

Gotta think Tom Brady will have as good or better success against the Titans secondary on Saturday. Combine Tennessee's ineptitude at stopping the pass with Brady's motivation to silence his critics following the release of last week's ESPN.com story and it's probably a good call to pick Brady as your DraftKings QB this weekend.

No doubt, Brady has highlighted this passage from last week's ESPN.com piece and will use it as motivation going forward: "People close to [Brady] believe [his issues with Bill Belichick's coaching style] started after last year's playoff win over the Houston Texans, in which Brady completed only 18-of-38 passes and threw two interceptions. Belichick lit into him in front of the entire team in a way nobody had ever seen, ripping Brady for carelessness with the ball. 'This will get us beat,' he told the team after replaying a Brady interception. 'We were lucky to get away with a win.'

"The criticism has continued this year, as Brady has been hit a lot and battled various injuries. Atypically, he has missed a lot of practices and, in the team's private evaluations, is showing the slippage of a 40-year-old quarterback even as he is contending for MVP and is as deadly as ever with the game on the line."

Titans' run game

You will hear a lot this week about how Titans running back Derrick Henry has the talent to shred the Patriots' suspect run defense, particularly after Henry lit up the Chiefs last Saturday night — rushing for 156 yards and a touchdown on 23 carries.

This might be a tad overblown, though, as Henry posted just two 100-plus yard rushing games this season prior to the outburst against Kansas City. This is not Todd Gurley or Le'Veon Bell coming to Foxborough this weekend.

The Titans finished a mediocre 15th in the NFL in average team rushing yards this season – running for 114.6 yards per game. The Patriots defense finished 20th in the league in rushing yards allowed, giving up 114.8 yards per game.

Expect the Pats defense to shut down Henry, and to force shaky quarterback Marcus Mariota to beat them.

NFL Playoffs

The playoff field is already down to eight teams as the Divisional Round is set for this coming weekend. A look at the matchups aside from Pats - Titans.

Falcons at Eagles (Saturday, 4:35 p.m., NBC): The sixth-seeded Falcons are currently favored on the road against the No. 1-seeded Eagles.

Jaguars at Steelers (Sunday, 1 p.m., CBS): Jacksonville already won in Pittsburgh once this season.

Saints at Vikings (Sunday, 4:40 p.m., Fox): Will the bye week cool down the red-hot Vikings?

Celts have

The C's have proved capable of beating any team in the league.

MATT BURKE
@burke_metro
matthew.burke@metro.us

The Celtics head to London this week with the most wins in the NBA at 33.

That's impressive on its own, but even more striking is who they've beaten so far this season. In 2017-18, the Celtics have beaten the six best teams in the Western Conference (Warriors, Rockets, Spurs, Timberwolves, Thunder, Nuggets) and five of the six best teams in the Eastern Conference excluding themselves (Raptors, Cavaliers, Heat, Bucks, Pistons). The one blemish there is the Wizards – who beat the C's on Christmas Day in Boston, 111-103.

The Celtics will be shooting for revenge against Washington on Thursday, Feb. 8 in D.C..

Now, the West is perceived as the mightier conference by most everyone – but the Celtics have actually done better against the West's elite teams this season than the top teams that reside in the East.

The Heat, currently fifth in the East with a 22-17 record, beat the Celtics at the Garden, 90-89, on Dec. 20 and were the team to end the Celtics' lengthy winning streak at 16 games on the night before Thanksgiving in Miami. The Celtics beat the Heat in Miami way back on Oct. 28, but that now seems like eons ago.

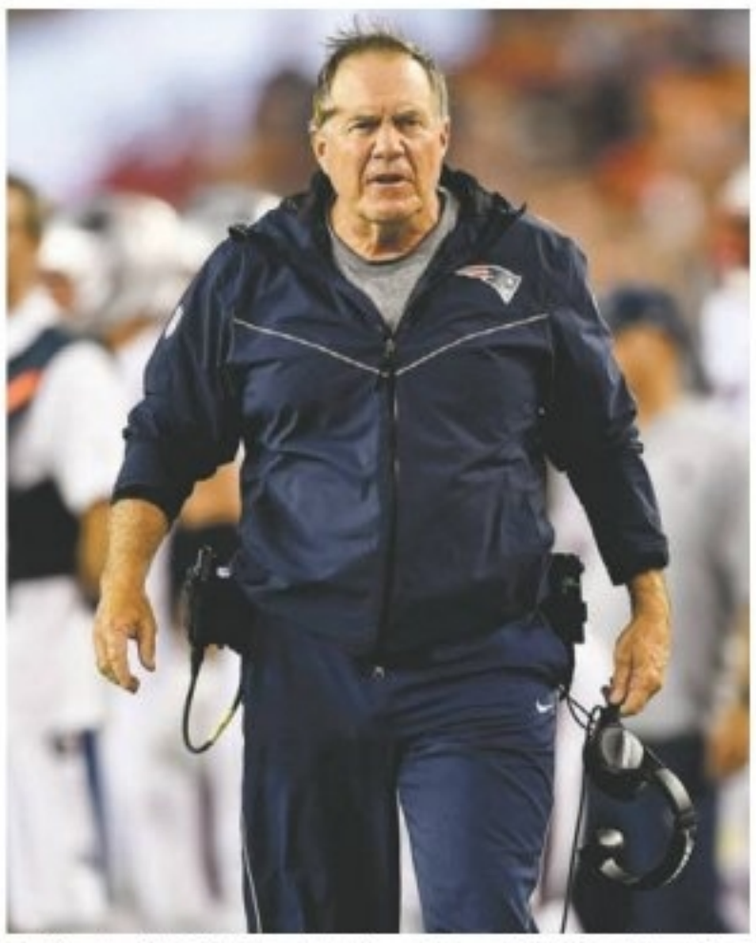
London calling

One team the Celtics have had zero issues with so far this season is the 76ers, who they'll see Thursday in London (3 p.m., NBC Sports Boston) and a week from Thursday at the Garden.

London has hosted eight NBA games since 2011 and this is the most anticipated game yet, according to The Express UK.

It will technically be a "home game" for the Sixers but Celtics guard Terry Rozier expects the C's to win over the crowd.

Belichick responds



On Monday, Bill Belichick weighed in on last week's ESPN article outlining the potential fall of the Pats' dynasty, telling WEEI's Dale & Holley, "I have a great relationship with both Robert [Kraft] and Tom [Brady] and I would throw in there, since it was part of the article, I feel like I have a good relationship with Alex [Guerrero], too." thrived vs. NBA's elite

"We have a great history, and not knocking the 76ers because they're a great team, but I think the fans are going to find out why they should support us over the 76ers when we play them in London," Rozier told The Express.

Rozier had been on a tear prior to a two-point outing in the Celtics win in Brooklyn Saturday night. In the previous six games Rozier scored at least 13 points.

The Celtics ripped Philly, 108-97, on Nov. 30 in Boston and toppled the Sixers in their arena, 102-92, back on Oct. 20.

Jayson Tatum blocks a shot by James Harden in the Celtics' win over the Rockets in late December. GETTY IMAGES

Be humble

Celtics head coach Brad Stevens is making sure Jayson Tatum's early-career success is not going to his head.

"I sent him a text that there's a lot of things that can derail forward progress," Stevens said after Tatum won the NBA Rookie of the Month award for December. "At the end of the day, though it's continuing to do all the great things that he's doing, because he's consistent, and that's why he got [the award] because he's played well and he's consistent. It's really hard to be consistent at any age, but certainly at 19-years-old. So there's a great opportunity to now respond to that nice reward."

Tatum responded in typical fashion Saturday night against the Nets, scoring the Celtics' last two buckets – one a monster one-handed slam and the other a corner 3-pointer to give the Celtics an 87-85 road win.

Aries Relationship problems will erupt if you get into a verbal battle. Choose a thoughtful way to deal with a situation that develops between you and a loved one.

Taurus An unusual offer will leave you questioning what to do next. Financial gain is apparent, and contractual negotiations are favored. A change of lifestyle is encouraged.

Gemini Look for any opportunity to advance at work, and do your best to take care of overdue responsibilities so that you can feel free to take advantage of what's being offered.

Cancer Make amends with someone you don't always get along with, but love regardless. A unique concept will encourage you to update your beliefs and opinions.

Leo Problems will escalate if you let your emotions lead the way. It's best to rely on your intelligence and bring about positive change based on facts, not on assumptions.

Virgo Taking business trips, dealing with friends or researching topics that will help you advance will make your day productive. You'll discover what really matters to you.

Libra Keep an open mind when dealing with loved ones. It's best to keep the peace instead of burning bridges. Consider that you may be just as much at fault as others.

Scorpio Don't flinch just because someone does something unexpected. Hold your ground and don't give in to peer pressure or outside influences.

Sagittarius Helping the underdog or standing up for rights being threatened by bureaucracy could lead to trouble. Protect against insult and injury.

Capricorn Avoid unpredictable situations or people who are trying to tempt you to change your mind or course of action. Stand behind your beliefs and do what's honorable.

Aquarius Check out all your options and call in favors if it will help you reach your target. Don't offer personal information to anyone using emotional tactics.

Pisces Care should be taken when dealing with people or an organization asking for something. Don't be too quick to take on added responsibilities. EUGENIA LAST
